Army general officers are on the move in unusual numbers.

It's attributed to the forthcoming retirement of General Matthew B. Ridgway, USA, and his replacement as Chief of Staff by General Maxwell D. Taylor, USA.

The advent of June always means stepped-up officer reassignments, but this year the shifts will be especially heavy during the summer months.

Yet to be named as THE JOURNAL went to press was a new commander for the Eighth Army and Army Forces Far East to replace General Lyman L. Lemnitzer, USA, who moved up to succeed General Taylor.

Acting commander is Lt. Gen. Thomas F. Hickey, USA, who many believe is due for reassignment to the United States. There's speculation General Hickey will be named to succeed Lt. Gen. A. R. Bolling, USA, retiring as Commander of the

New Survivor Plan Boosts Widow Benefits; Puts All In Uniform Under Social Security(MORE DETAILS OF NEW PLAN ON PAGES 1211, 1235 AND 1236)

A Select Committee of the House of Representatives opened hearings this week on a plan which calls for sweeping changes in military survivor benefits.

The proposal would increase widows' pensions almost 400 per cent in some instances and would bring all Service personnel under contributory Social Security—with maximum pay deductions of $84 per year.

It also would erase free life insurance and eliminate all FECA (Federal Employees Compensation Act) benefits for Reservists called to active duty after passage of the bill.

The minimum six months' death gratuity would be increased to $800 and the maximum payment lowered to $3,000.

New pension rates would be established for widows, dependent children and dependent parents. Survivors now receiving benefits would be permitted to keep the present benefit or elect the new payments.

Survivors of all military personnel who have died on active duty or from service-connected causes since 16 Sept. 1940, would automatically be brought under Social Security.

VA compensation rates are changed. The present wartime rate is $87 a month for a widow, $121 for a widow and one child, and $29 for each additional child. Peacetime rates are 80 per cent of the wartime rates.

The new plan provides monthly payments for widows, with or without children, equal to $100 plus 15 per cent of the deceased's basic pay. No distinction is made between wartime and peacetime benefits. No weight is given to a widow with minor children inasmuch as Social Security provides payments for minors.

Lump Sum "RIF" Pay For Reservists
Could Mean Thousands Of Dollars Aid

The Pentagon wants Congress to vote legislation which would provide lump sum rehabilitation pay—worth thousands of dollars—to Reserve officers and warrant officers released from active duty involuntarily after at least five years continuous service.

The measure would provide increased security for an estimated 150,000 Reservists required for the foreseeable future, Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens told Congress.

The bill, which would cost almost $5.5 million in the fiscal year starting 1 July, has White House support. It has been introduced by Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee.

Here's how the lump sum payment would be computed:

For active duty service from 5-10 years, the Reserve officer or W.O. released involuntarily would receive one-half of one month's basic pay for each year.

For similar service above 10 years, the

WHAT'S IT WORTH?

How much would the Pentagon rehabilitation pay proposal be worth to a major with 15 years' service who was released involuntarily?

The answer: $5,148.

Here's how it is computed. His base pay is $514.80 per month. For the first 10 years he is credited with one-half month's basic pay per year, which is 10 times $257.40. For the next five years, he gets a full month's pay credit, or $514.80 times five. Add the two and it comes to $5,148.

computation would be on the basis of half of one month's basic pay for the first 10 years and then on one month's basic pay for each year beginning with

New Plan May Boost
Retired Income $162

Retirement income of scores of thousands of military personnel who leave the Service in future years, and many already retired, would be increased by as much as $162.80 per month by the new survivor benefits legislation proposed by the Hardy Committee.

In some instances, according to a study made by the General Accounting Office, military members will "receive substantially the same amount in retirement as their base pay while on active duty and more than 70 per cent of their gross pay."

The proposed bill would bring all military personnel under Social Security. It provides, also, that Social Security retirement benefits accrued by Servicemen and women while in the Armed Forces "would be additive to the present military retirement."

This means, if the measure is approved, that retired personnel, when they reach the age of 65, could collect both their military retirement pay and Social Security retirement benefits which they have earned.

Social Security benefits are computed on an individual basis, and many vary (Please turn to Page 1235)

Gen. Ridgway Views The Army's Future

THE JOURNAL is privileged to salute the 180th Birthday Anniversary celebration of the U. S. Army on 14 June with a special article by General Matthew B. Ridgway, USA, Chief of Staff, who retires on 30 June.

General Ridgway discusses the new challenges which confront the Army and how they are being met.

The Chief of Staff tells how an enemy could launch an attack against the Free World "with rapid, massive and widely distributed blows." He tells how such an attack should be met and emphasizes that the total task of defense "is much too great for any one Service."

General Ridgway's article, "The Army Looks to the Future," prepared especially for THE JOURNAL's birthday tribute, appears on Page 1219.

Army Will Assign Thousands Of Obligated To Reserve-Guard Mobilization Posts

Scores of thousands of Army officers and EM released from active duty with eight-year obligations will be designated for mobilization assignments in the Reserve and National Guard.

The Army, under its new Emergency Reinforcement Plan, will begin making such assignments on 1 July. The plan is designed to assure the prompt filling of recall quotas for active duty during early phases of mobilization, and to encourage voluntary participation in National Guard and Army Reserve training programs, the Army said.

Men, selected for emergency reinforcement designations will be from among those who are not participating as members of reserve component units.

The reservists will be designated for three-year periods as reinforcements to active Army units or installations and to National Guard and Army Reserve units located as near their homes as practicable.

However, the reinforcement designations can be terminated by men who enlist in the Regular Army or a National Guard unit, or those who volunteer for assignment to an Army Reserve unit with the objective of full and active participation.

The plan will not be applied to obligated reservists who have undergone hardships and suffering in, or as a result of, combat.

The reinforcement designations are not "assignments" in the ordinary sense. The men will not become organic parts of their respective organizations, merely being pre-selected for assignments on or after M-Day when the unit and individuals are ordered to active duty.

In all cases the designations will be limited so as not to cause any unit or installation to exceed 115 per cent of its authorized strength plus emergency reinforcements.

Obligated reservists who have had prior National Guard or Army Reserve service will generally be designated to National Guard or Army Reserve units, respectively.

Lump Sum "RIF" Pay For Reserves Could Mean Thousands of Dollars Aid

the 11th and ending at the close of the 20th year.

The proposed bill says that a part of year that is six months or more would be counted as a full year; less than six months would be disregarded.

The lump sum proposal is designed primarily to provide a readjustment payment for Reserve officers involuntarily released from active duty, the Pentagon stressed. The following classes of persons would not be entitled to such payments:

(1) those released from active duty at their own request;

(2) those released from active duty for training;

(3) those released from active duty because of moral or professional dereliction; and

(4) those who upon release would be immediately eligible for retired or retirement pay based upon military service or who elect to receive severance or separation pay, based upon military service under any other provision of law.

Additionally, Reserve officers involuntarily released may elect to receive readjustment pay or Veterans Administration disability compensation to which they may be entitled, but duplicate payments would not be permitted.

By special provision, a reserve officer on active duty and within two years of qualifying for retired or retirement pay could not be involuntarily separated from active duty before he so qualifies except with the approval of the Secretary of the military department concerned.

Acceptance of readjustment pay would not deprive a person of any retired or retirement pay or other retirement benefits from the United States to which he would otherwise become entitled. However, an amount fixed by regulation and based upon the person's life expectancy would be deducted each month from any retired or retirement pay which is based entirely on military service for which he has received readjustment pay until the total amount of the deductions equals the amount of the readjustment pay received.

Additionally, those who receive readjustment pay under this legislation would not be entitled to mustering-out pay under the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944 or under the Veterans' Readjustment Assistance Act of 1952.

The Pentagon told Congress:

"As a result of the Korean hostilities and related international tension of the last few years, a large number of reserve officers with wartime experience have been retained on active duty. These officers have served faithfully and efficiently, in many cases, for ten or more years. Many are approaching the age at which their usefulness to the military force is less than that of younger officers who are needed for current and future military services. These older Reserve officers have been away from civilian life for an extended period and in some cases have been called away from their civilian occupations on two separate occasions during World War II and the Korean Incident. The Department of Defense believes that they should be given an equitable payment upon involuntary release from active military duty to help them readjust to civilian life again.

"THE PRINCIPLE OF READJUSTMENT pay embodied in this legislative proposal is not new. Under the provisions of Title IV of the Career Compensation Act of 1949, severance pay is provided for regular officers involuntarily separated for physical disability. Likewise, section 235 of the Armed Forces Reserve Act of 1952 authorizes separation pay for Reserve officers involuntarily released from active duty prior to the expiration of the person's agreed period of service entered into under the provisions of that section. This proposal would provide readjustment pay supplementary to that outlined above and for a class of officers for which such benefits are not now provided under existing law. It would not duplicate or provide double benefits since an individual could not receive readjustment pay and severance or separation pay.

"In drafting and recommending this proposal, the Department has tried to provide: (1) equitable, but not excessive, compensation for those involuntarily released; (2) a readjustment pay that is not so attractive as to deter Reserve officers from striving for regular appointments; (3) that an officer who receives such benefits in relation to acquiring retirement eligibility under other laws applicable to him not be penalized; and (4) to guarantee the Reserve officer that if he remains on active duty for a number of years and is then involuntarily released, he will be assured of some degree of economic security during his readjustment to civilian life.

"IT IS ESTIMATED that to maintain the active military forces at a level approximating 2.8 million currently and for the foreseeable, it will be necessary to keep approximately 150,000 Reserve officers on active duty to supplement the regular officer corps. Excessive turnover of these reserve personnel is costly and detrimental to the effectiveness of the military forces and the national security. The economic security which would be given by this legislation provides an inducement for qualified Reserve officers to remain on active duty for prolonged periods thereby reducing costly personnel turnover and increasing the effectiveness of our fighting forces through retention of experienced officers needed to direct our military units."

Committee Plan Increases Widow Benefits; Puts All In Uniform Under Social Security

in the new proposal are $70 for one child, $100 for two children, $130 for three, and $25 extra for each additional child.

New flat scales for dependent parents proposed by the measure are predicated on the annual income of the survivor.

Representative Porter Hardy, Jr. (D-Va), Chairman of the Select Committee, said "there is nothing in the new proposal which would in any way reduce payments" now being received by survivors "unless the individual elects to come under this bill."

Initial payments will be reduced for some who elect to come under the new plan, but the value of benefits over a lifetime "will be increased," Congressman Hardy pointed out.

He said the measures carry the blessing of President Eisenhower. Members of the Committee conferred with the President at the White House prior to public announcement of the plan.

Pentagon officials also announced Defense Department support for the proposal.

The Hardy plan would replace a number of complex laws which currently determine the extent of survivors' benefits. These laws make it possible for some survivors to receive hundreds of dollars a month while others are paid less than the minimum subsistence standard.

The new proposal has rounded up the numerous measures, smoothed them out, changed them where necessary and drafted them into a single law which will be easier to administer and which will provide more equitable benefits for all. The legislation also is expected to simplify application procedures, thereby making it easier for survivors to collect benefits for which they are eligible.

The plan would place all military personnel under Social Security with Service men and women turning over two per cent of their basic pay (up to $4,200) to the Government. The maximum amount which any individual would pay would be $84 a year.

Social Security retirement benefits accrued by Service personnel would be added to retired pay.

A provision in the bill would give immediate Social Security status to all military men and women. Thus, if an individual died on active duty or of a service-connected cause immediately after passage of the bill, his survivors would be eligible for Social Security benefits just as though they were currently insured.

The Social Security law provides that if an individual has contributed to Social Security for more than five years and subsequently becomes totally and permanently disabled, he is automatically insured for the rest of his life without making further contributions. The Hardy bill proposes that military personnel who become permanently and totally disabled as a result of military service "shall be deemed to have contributed for a period of five years," thus making them eligible for the automatic insurance privilege.

Elimination of free life insurance, Congressman Hardy said, is proposed to offset the "more liberal annuities" provided in the new plan. He said there will be no need for such insurance once the new law goes into effect.

Service personnel who now have NSLI policies on which they pay no premium (they number about 830,000) would be permitted by the terms of the new plan to keep the free insurance. However, if they do so, their survivors would be eligible only for the present benefits.

If those who hold free insurance elect to resume the premium payments on their policies, their survivors would become immediately eligible for the new benefit rates proposed by the Hardy Committee.

Another change asked by the Committee is in the present death gratuity benefit. Currently, this benefit is decided on the basis of six months' basic and special pay, which means that some survivors receive less than $500 while others receive almost $7,000.

The Committee said it believes the present minimum death gratuity ($468) is "too low" and the present maximum ($6,857) "excessive." The death gratuity, under the terms of the new plan, will be continued and computed on the same basis as today except that the minimum payment under this benefit will be $800 and the maximum payment $3,000.

Gen. Ridgway Urges Army Personnel To Support Joint AER-ARS Fund Drive

The joint annual fund campaign of Army Emergency Relief and Army Relief Society conducted under AR 910-10 was initiated on 1 June by Maj. Gen. Edward F. Witsell, Director, Army Emergency Relief.

The objectives of the campaign are to keep all members of the Army on active duty and their dependents informed as to the type of financial assistance available to them and to raise sufficient funds to enable both organizations to operate without incurring an annual deficit.

The time and method of conducting the campaign is left entirely to the discretion of each local or higher commander. During the conduct of the campaign each member of a command is given an opportunity to make a small voluntary contribution.

AER rendered financial assistance to over 33,000 members of the Army or their dependents in an amount of $3,648,000 under many varying types of emergencies or situations during 1954. For the 1st Quarter of 1955 ending 31 March over 1 million dollars was similarly expended for assistance, which represents an annual rate in excess of 4 million dollars. It is estimated that approximately $800,000 must be raised in order that AER may operate without incurring a deficit in 1955. This amount can easily be raised if nearly every officer and enlisted man makes a small contribution.

General Ridgway has issued the following statement in support of the campaign: "There are occasions when Army families, through no fault of their own, find themselves in need of immediate assistance to help them through an emergency. At such times it is good to know that Army Emergency Relief and the Army Relief Society stand ready. These two fine organizations serve the members of the Army faithfully and selflessly and they deserve our faithful support. They offer us a splendid way to help each other when the need is greatest.

"I strongly urge the men and women of the Army to contribute as generously as possible to the 1955 joint fund campaign of Army Emergency Relief and the Army Relief Society."

SecNav Sets '55 USMC Officer Distribution

Navy Secretary Charles S. Thomas has completed the grade distribution of Marine Corps officers for 1955.

As a result, vacancies exist for advancement of all officers who are on the promotion lists for the ranks of major and captain. Vacancies also exist in the rank of lieutenant colonel for promotion of the first 408 majors, through John F. Bolt, USMC, Signal No. 366 in the 1 Jan. 54 Register.

These vacancies, with pay and allowances, date back to 31 Dec. 54, the Marine Corps said. Officers on the promotion list who are junior to Major Bolt will be advanced as vacancies occur.

The Marine Corps said that normal administrative time will be required to process the large number of officers involved. In the cases of officers for whom vacancies exist, promotions are being effected immediately after Secretary Thomas approves the results of the various examining boards.

Protection Plan Receives Solid Backing; VA Asks Increased Minimum For Widows

Strong support for the new survivor benefits plan—including a proposal to boost the minimum widows' pension to $125 — came from a number of high sources this week as the Hardy Select Committee of the House of Representatives opened hearings on the measure.

Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson said in a letter to the Committee that he is in favor of the plan and the proposal has the backing of President Eisenhower.

A Bureau of the Budget spokesman said the bill "achieves the President's objectives" of providing "adequate minimum protection" for survivors without increasing the overall cost of the program.

RAdm. E. W. Grenfell, USN, who heads the Defense Department task force on survivor benefits, said the Pentagon "strongly supports" the measure, which "is a vitally needed improvement over existing law."

He said the plan "represents an acceptable combination of good ideas from many sources. It will provide an adequate and equitable level of benefits for all categories of survivors."

He added, also, that the plan "will be simple to administer and should be of great value as a military career incentive." He expressed the hope that the legislation "can be enacted into law during this session of the Congress."

Spokesmen for the Veterans Administration and the General Accounting Office also gave general support to the plan, although both voiced some reservations.

Charles E. Eckert, legislative attorney for the General Accounting Office, said the GAO is "unalterably opposed" to provisions of the bill which would permit immediate payment of the six-month death gratuity by relieving Service disbursing officers from accountability. Such action, he said, would make the disbursing officers "the final arbiters of their own authority" and this "is contrary to the basic precepts of representative government."

Chairman Porter Hardy (D-Va) and other members of the Committee indicated that the GAO views would be considered but that every effort would be made to retain in the bill some provision which would enable widows to collect the death gratuity without delay.

The GAO also asked that dependency criteria be "tightened up" for dependent parents. Assistant VA Administrator G. H. Birdsall said this would make the plan more difficult to administer.

The VA said the basic issues in the plan "are reasonable and can be forcefully supported."

Mr. Birdsall suggested that the beneficiaries of the six-month death gratuity be extended to cover non-dependent parents and non-dependent brothers and sisters. He also urged the Committee to provide a minimum monthly payment of $125 for widows.

He said the question which gives the VA "most concern at the moment is the adequacy of the compensation benefit which would be payable to the widow in cases of the lowest military pay grades."

He told the Committee, "It would appear that $112 per month as provided in the bill for the lowest grades is somewhat low in comparison to the $162.50 presently payable for the first 10 years. Since there is a rather high incidence of early remarriage this difference in benefit levels is not, in many cases, overcome by the theory that on a life expectancy basis the widow would receive more under the proposal than she would under the present program."

Survivor Plan Seeks Living Standard Raise For Widows; Means Hundreds of Dollars

Substandard living conditions forced on military widows as a result of inequitable survivor benefits legislation would be eliminated by the new Hardy Plan.

The new legislation, for example, would boost from $70 to $261 per month the benefits for the widow of a two-star officer up to age 65.

After that, her payments from the Government would be $314 per month, compared with the present $123.

For years, top Government officials have been upset over the grievous treatment of Service widows.

Solutions to the problem have been difficult to find because of the complexity of the laws involved. Steps have now been taken by the Hardy Committee to erase the deficiencies of present laws and establish new benefits which will provide greater security for these women, whose husbands died in the Service of the Nation.

Under the proposed legislation, the Committee hopes to solve the problem by giving Service widows:

1—A death gratuity of at least $800, but not more than $3,000. The amount is determined by multiplying the deceased Serviceman's basic and special pays by six. If the amount is less than $800, the survivor will receive $800. If more than $3,000, the survivor will receive $3,000. If any amount in between, the survivor will receive the exact amount.

The proposal also provides that the death gratuity can be paid to the widow immediately if she is living on the base where the death occurred. Disbursing officers are relieved from accountability by the terms of the bill.

2—In addition, the widow will receive monthly payments from the Veterans Administration of $100 plus 15 per cent of the deceased Serviceman's basic pay. If she has minor children, additional amounts will be included in the payments to cover Social Security benefits until each child reaches the age of 18. This applies to those already receiving benefits as well as to future survivors.

3—When the youngest child reaches age 18, Social Security benefits will cease temporarily and the monthly check will be $100 plus 15 per cent of the deceased Serviceman's basic pay.

4—At age 65, the widow's check will be increased by the addition of Social Security OASI (Old Age Survivor's Insurance) benefits.

These are the minimum benefits which a widow, with or without children, could receive under the plan:

Pay Grade of Deceased Member	Widow's VA Compensation
O-1 (under 2 years)	$133.35
O-2 (over 2 years)	141.13
O-3 (over 4 years)	156.16
O-4 (over 10 years)	172.54
O-5 (over 14 years)	184.24
O-6 (over 18 years)	207.64
O-7 (over 26 years)	235.72
O-8 (over 30 years)	261.46
W-1 (over 10 years)	144.12
W-2 (over 12 years)	150.31
W-3 (over 18 years)	160.84
W-4 (over 26 years)	177.22
E-1 (under 4 mos.)	111.70
E-1 (over 4 mos.)	112.48
E-2 (under 2 years)	112.87
E-3 (under 2 years)	114.91
E-4 (over 2 years)	121.06
E-5 (over 4 years)	127.50
E-6 (over 6 years)	132.18
E-7 (over 8 years)	138.03

Widows already receiving survivor benefits (VA compensation) will materially benefit from the provisions of the Hardy bill.

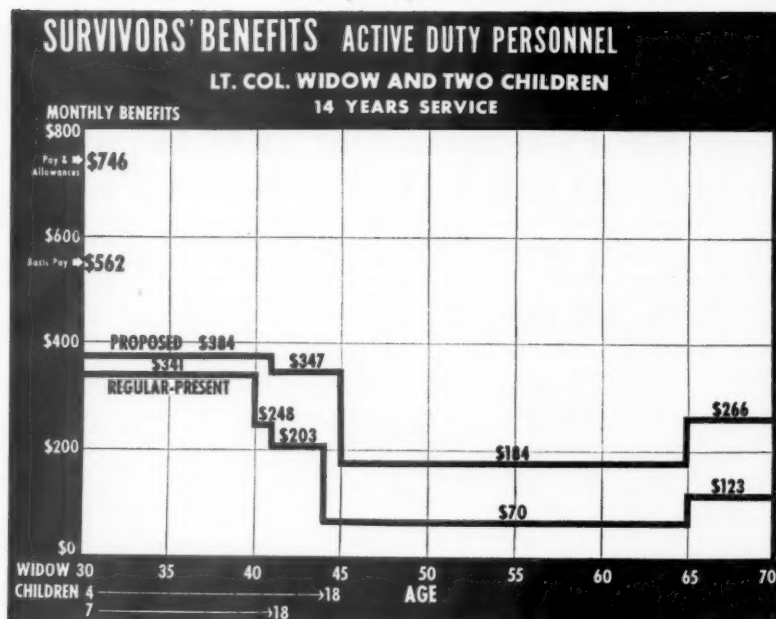

All widows without children will receive at least $112 (see chart above) instead of the $87 (or $70 peacetime rate) currently being paid. This is a minimum increase of 28 per cent, if the widow is not now drawing payments under the Servicemen's Indemnity Act (that is, payments from National Service Life Insurance). She can elect to forfeit the NSLI payments, if she chooses, and draw the new benefits.

Many widows with children will become eligible for Social Security benefits because of the "immediate coverage" feature of the proposal which would create entitlements for those widows whose husbands died before attaining six quarters of Social Security coverage.

11 June 1955

Army Navy Air Force Journal

THIS chart shows the monthly benefits which the widow of a lieutenant colonel with more than 14 years' service would receive under the Hardy Plan if her husband died and left her with two small children.

At present (bottom line), the widow receives $341 a month for the first 10 years until her NSLI (National Service Life Insurance) benefits expire. The amount then drops to $248 monthly for the next year, until the oldest child (age 7) reaches the age of 18. Social Security and VA benefits for that child then cease and the amount drops to $203. This amount continues until the youngest child (age 4) reaches 18 and her Social Security and VA benefits are withdrawn. The widow's compensation then is reduced to $70. She continues to receive this amount until she reaches the age of 65 when OASI (Old Age Survivor's Insurance) boosts the check to $123.

Under the Hardy Committee plan, the widow would initially receive $384 a month ($100, plus 15 per cent of her husband's active duty pay, plus $200 from Social Security for the two minor children). Free insurance is eliminated by the plan so no NSLI benefits are included. Thus, the $384 payment would not change until the oldest child reaches age 18 at which time it would drop to $347. This would continue for the next nine years until the youngest child reaches age 18 when it would drop to $184, which the widow would receive until age 65. At that age, OASI benefits would boost the payment to $266 for the remainder of the widow's life.

In addition to the benefits shown on this chart, the widow also would receive a $3,000 death gratuity at the time of her husband's death. This amount is determined by multiplying the officer's basic pay (in this instance, $562) times six. This comes out $3,372, but the Committee has set a $3,000 ceiling on the death gratuity payment, thus limiting the maximum amount that can be paid.

Army EM Promotions Out of Doldrums; June Quota O.K.'s 117,250; More E-7's Due

The Army will wind up its EM promotions for FY '55 with a bang; 117,250 advancements are authorized for June—six times the May figure of 19,600.

The June quota includes 150 promotions to E-7, in addition to the 200 last month, which had been estimated to be the fiscal year's total.

Also approved for June (with May totals in parentheses), are 1100 promotions to E-6 (700); 8000 to E-5 (6700); 66,000

Army officials have said repeatedly that the cutback program would not permit satisfactory promotion opportunities.

It was necessary, however, for personnel planners to be extremely cautious as the impact of reduced manpower plans hit initially.

Now, given a chance to step up the promotion pace, the Pentagon has approved the six-fold increase.

Ft. Dix Housing Project Dedication 16 June

A 400-unit Wherry housing project, which will be used by personnel at Ft. Dix and McGuire AFB, N. J., will be dedicated 16 June.

The units, named in honor of the late Maj. Gen. Chase W. Kennedy, first commanding general at Ft. Dix, will be presented to Maj. Gen. John W. Harmony, USA, commanding general of Ft. Dix and the 69th Infantry Division.

Other guests who will attend the ceremonies are Brig. Gen. Robert W. Ward, USA, assistant commander of the 69th, and Col. George B. Dany, USAF, commander of the 1611th Air Transport Wing at McGuire AFB. Post Chaplain (Col.) John K. Connelly, USA, will pronounce the invocation.

General Kennedy, for whom the project is named, was retired from active service in 1922, after 40 years of service, and died in Washington, D. C., in 1936. He was a 1883 graduate of West Point. He served on Indian territory frontier duty, fought in the Spanish-American War, and assumed command of Ft. Dix and the 78th Division when the United States entered WW I. He later commanded the 85th Division in combat in France.

NORTH AMERICAN HAS BUILT MORE AIRPLANES THAN ANY OTHER COMPANY IN THE WORLD

WHO LEADS IN GUIDED MISSILES?

It is no accident that the United States leads the world in the vital business of building guided missiles. We lead because American industries like North American Aviation are far ahead of the world in the highly advanced scientific, engineering and technical fields needed to design and build successful missiles. One example of this leadership is North American's SM-64 Navaho, an intercontinental, surface-to-surface strategic guided missile for the U.S. Air Force.

North American Pioneered in all three basic phases of missile design and development:

While North American's propulsion specialists have solved many unprecedented problems of rocket engine engineering...

Other North American technicians designed and built airframes capable of withstanding the stresses of ultrasonic flight.

Still others have engineered the highly precise guidance and control mechanism... the missile's "brain."

Working for the Future

Maintaining its leadership in all phases of guided missile development and manufacture, North American is working on advanced new developments in the design and production of rocket engines and guidance and control mechanisms for its own and other missile programs throughout the country. Constant research and development keep North American foremost in aircraft, rocket engines, electronics and peaceful applications of atomic energy.

Engineers: For information on North American's missile team, write: Engineering Personnel Office, 12214 Lakewood Blvd., Downey (Los Angeles County), California. North American also offers challenging career opportunities in its complete engineering facilities at Los Angeles, California, and Columbus, Ohio.

Navy Releases 16,500 USNR Officers On 1 Sept

About 16,500 Reserve officers will be dropped from Navy rolls on 1 September. The reduction is a continuation of a program started last year when 45,000 inactive status Reserve officers were given honorable discharges. The new cut will bring the total Naval Reserve officer strength to approximately 225,000. At one time the Navy carried 313,000 on its roster.

The officers due for release—the great majority in ranks below lieutenant commander—are those who have not participated in Navy training programs for at least two years, the Navy said.

The affected officers will be notified by their Naval District Commandants.

According to the Navy, in many instances, the press of civilian affairs or geographical location at home and overseas contributed to the lack of participation in the Reserve program.

RAdm. Cruise Named Comdr., Fleet Air Hawaii

RAdm. Edgar A. Cruise, USN, has become Commander of Fleet Air Hawaii. He succeeds Capt. F. G. Raysbrook, USN, who resumes command of Fleet Air Wing TWO at Barbers Point Naval Air Station, a post he had held jointly with the Fleet Air Hawaii command since last January.

Admiral Cruise is the former commander of Carrier Division Six.

Third Edition of Naval Officer's Manual Out

The third edition of The Naval Officer's Manual by RAdm. Harley Cope, USN (Ret.), has been published by The Military Service Publishing Company. It is 608 pages long and retails for $4.

The latest edition of this standard work, 20 per cent larger than the others, contains a new chapter on the Navy as a career. The chapter on the Navy's vast school system lists courses for officers and officer candidates and shows many opportunities available for advancement. Useful information about the Naval Reserves is given in a separate chapter, and a new and informative chapter is devoted to Women of the Navy.

The volume contains information based on regulations and official directives designed to help officers, Regulars and Reserves, solve problems relating to leadership, discipline and administration. It also contains information about pay and promotions, travel and transportation, records and reports, uniforms and insignia, public relations, public speaking, and administration of justice under the new code.

CMC Sets Up 96-Hour Passes For Remote Commands; Navy Studies Situation

Long-awaited authority to grant four-day weekends has been granted to some Marine Corps commands; the Navy reports the 96-hour liberty "is still under study."

The remote Marine Corps commands authorized to grant 96-hour liberties are: 2d Marine Division; 2d Marine Aircraft Wing; Force Troops, FMFLant; MCB, Camp Lejeune; MCAB's, Cherry Point; and Marine Training Group 20.

Following a speedletter from General Lemuel C. Shepherd, USMC, Marine Commandant, to these commands, many personnel were given long passes over the Memorial Day Weekend.

In announcing his decision to set up the 96-Hour policy, the Commandant stated that the purpose of the new program is to give commands located at far distances from large cities, or which are often engaged in extended training exercises, the right to grant deserving personnel a sufficient number of days over a weekend to permit them safe travel on "infrequent occasions."

It was pointed out that the new policy is not intended to grant authorization for more leave over an extended period of time than that to which an individual would normally be entitled. At the same time, he stated, 96-hour liberties are not to be granted to extend leave periods, when it becomes necessary to curtail normal or necessary operations, or when long leaves would diminish the scope, caliber, or duration of prescribed training programs.

General Shepherd also said that the four-day weekend policy was set in motion in an attempt to reduce traffic accidents by eliminating, as much as possible, extended periods of night driving.

"It is anticipated," he said, "that proper implementation of this program, by establishing departure and return times so that the major portion of the travel involved can be reasonably completed during daylight hours, will eliminate the current tendency of individuals to travel excessive distances, remain too long at destinations, and to drive at excessive speeds."

Marine Corps commands, other than those already granted 96-hour liberties, may submit requests for authorization to Headquarters. The requests should contain detailed justification and special circumstances involved.

Marine Air Group-24 Shifts Command Slots

A shuffle of command positions in MAG-24, involving five officers, was recently effected at MCAS, Cherry Point, N. C.

The command changes began with Lt. Col. H. M. Bourgeois, USMC, departing for duty with the Marine Corps Equipment Board, MCAS, Quantico, Va.; he was relieved as commanding officer of H&MS-24 by Maj. D. T. Olson, USMC, former Executive Officer, VMF(N)-531.

Lt. Col. G. E. Gray, USMC, Assistant Wing Commander, 2d MAW, assumed command of MABS-24, relieving Lt. Col. E. Mueller, USMC, who became Commanding Officer, VMF-114.

Lt. Col. P. F. Avant, USMC, who relinquished command of VMF-114, became the new Assistant Wing Commander.

Earlier, Lt. Col. Arnold A. Lund, USMC, turned over command of VMF-312 to Maj. Robert Baird, USMC, and assumed duties as Assistant G-3, 2dMAW.

Brig. Gen. Binney Heads Marine Air Reserve Tng.

Brig. Gen. Arthur F. Binney, USMC, has assumed duties as Commander, Marine Air Reserve Training, Glenview, Ill., succeeding Brig. Gen. Frank H. Lamson-Scribner, USMC, who retired on 1 June.

General Binney, a 1929 graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy, served as Assistant Commanding General, 3d MAW, MCAS, Miami, since August 1954. He served in the Pacific during WWII and was Chief of Staff of the 1st MAW in Korea from 1951 to 1954. In addition to his overseas posts, General Binney has had service at almost every Marine Corps post and Station in the United States.

"WHAT! NO KITCHEN TELEPHONE?"

Of all things, Mr. Bridegroom! Surely you don't expect that lovely new bride to get along without a telephone in the kitchen!

Maybe there was a time when one telephone seemed enough, just as one radio and one bathroom and one car seemed enough.

But everybody is used to more comfort and convenience these days. And there's nothing that makes life so much easier as telephones around the home.

In the living room, of course. In the kitchen, conveniently hung on the wall. In the bedroom, to save steps and for added peace of mind both day and night. For the son and daughter who'd like telephones of their own, with separate listings.

Would you like to know more about complete telephone service and how surprisingly little it costs? Just call the business office of your local Bell telephone company.

Col. Charles Marteney Named SAC Chaplain

Chaplain (Col.) Charles W. Marteney, USAF, formerly of Headquarters, USAF, has been named Strategic Air Command Staff Chaplain.

He succeeds Chaplain (Col.) John C. W. Linsley, USAF, who has been assigned with the USAF in Europe. Colonel Linsley recently received the degree of Doctor of Sacred Theology in ceremonies at the General Theological Seminary, N. Y.

GENERAL CURTIS E. LEMAY, Commander-in-Chief, Strategic Air Command, presents the Commendation Medal to Col. Stephen D. McElroy, Director of Personnel for SAC. Ceremony took place in the SAC commander-in-chief's office at Offutt AFB, Nebr. Among Colonel McElroy's projects, mentioned in the citation accompanying the award, were his efforts towards the retention of highly skilled military personnel in the command. The presentation was made prior to his departure for Barksdale AFB, La., where he will command the 367th Bomb Wing, a B-47 unit of the Strategic Air Command.

USAF Dental Surgeons Hold Conference At Hq.

Senior Dental Surgeons, representing every major command of the Air Force, assembled in Washington, D. C., from all over the world for a conference at Headquarters, USAF, recently.

Brig. Gen. Marvin E. Kennebeck (DC), Assistant for Dental Services, Office of the Surgeon General, was official host. Maj. Gen. Dan C. Ogle, Surgeon General of the Air Force Medical Service, gave the welcoming address.

The purpose of the conference was to discuss management improvement, and to exchange information on professional and administrative matters between Headquarters, USAF and senior officers serving either as major command dental surgeons or in other key dental positions.

The conference agenda, during the first two days, included formal presentations by each Dental Surgeon and special lectures by Col. Perry C. Bullard and Maj. Stephen L. Rozakis, both of Hqs, USAF. The final day was reserved for discussions of specific problems of direct concern to the group. Col. John K. Sitzman was Moderator.

Maj. Gen. Julius K. Lacey, USAF, who left Tokyo 4 June for reassignment at Maxwell AFB, Ala., was presented the Distinguished Service Medal prior to his departure.

Formerly Deputy Chief of Staff, Plans, United Nations and Far East Commands, General Lacey was cited for "exceptionally meritorious service in positions of great responsibility as Vice Commander, 5th Air Force, and Senior Member, United Nations Component of the Military Armistice Commission, in Korea, and as special assistant to the Commander, Far East Air Forces, Assistant Chief of Staff, J-3, and Deputy Chief of Staff for Plans, UNC/FEC, in Japan."

The citation declared General Lacey "proffered timely recommendation on matters of major decision, policy and planning, and developed attitudes, concepts and tactics which permitted reasoned negotiation and logical conclusions."

Col. Cochrane Reports SAC Safety At 19 Bases

Nineteen major Strategic Air Command bases flew safely in May with neither a major nor minor accident to mar their records, Col. C. J. Cochrane, USAF, chief of SAC's safety division, said this week.

Topping the accident-free list is Ramey AFB, P. R., which last month completed two years of safe aircraft operation. In runner-up position are Mountain Home and Carswell AFBs, both accident-free since January 1954.

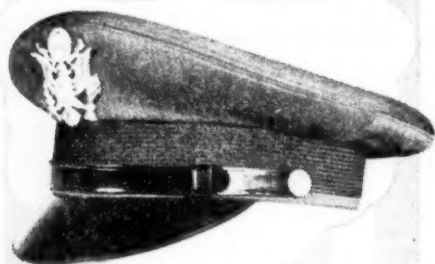

Other accident-free major SAC stations listed according to the month and year in which their current accident-free period began are: Travis, July '54; Altus, July '54; Castle, March '55; Fairchild, March '55; Lake Charles, March '55; Sedalia, March '55; Dow, March '55; March AFB, April '55; Great Falls, April '55; Hunter, April '55; MacDill, April '55; Biggs, April '55; Forbes, April '55; Offutt, May '55; Lockbourne, May '55, and Bergstrom, May '55.

Harmon AB Jet Group Sets Operational Record

The 61st Fighter-Interceptor Squadron, operating out of Ernest Harmon AB, Newfoundland, racked up a total of 1501.30 hours in F-89D aircraft during May, said to be a possible record for an all-jet group.

Commanded by Maj. Phil A. Rand, the 61st bettered its previous record of 1201 hours, set in April, by more than 300 hours.

Ninety hours of flight were chalked up by pilots and radar operators during a storm on the final day of the month. In addition, a new record for radar operators also was set during May by Capt. James W. Mogen, assigned to 61st Squadron, who logged 133 hours of flight time.

First Flight of the Hercules powered by America's first production Turbo-Prop engines

A NEW era in America's military transport operations was opened when the U.S. Air Force's first production Turbo-Prop cargo transport, the Lockheed C-130A Hercules, took off from Dobbins Air Force Base, Georgia.

Powered by four Allison T56 Turbo-Prop engines, the 54-ton transport was air-borne eight seconds after the brakes were released and climbed to 2,500 feet by the time it passed over the end of the 10,000-ft. runway. Test Pilot B. A. (Bud) Martin said: "It is the finest flying airplane I have ever operated."

Developing more than 2.3 horsepower per pound of engine weight, and with a frontal area approximately half that of present transport piston engines, the 3750-h.p. T56 gives the four-engine Hercules a speed exceeding that of many World War II fighters.

A commercial version of the military engine—the Allison Model 501—will bring new standards of faster, quieter, more comfortable air travel in airliners that can operate from any airport now served by commercial air carriers. And, with its economical use of lower-cost fuel, this new engine will substantially reduce the operating cost of the all-cargo transport.

These great new Turbo-Props reflect the knowledge Allison has gained in designing and building gas turbine engines which have flown more than six million hours. These engines are daily flying the equivalent of one hundred trips around the world—experience where it counts most—in the air.

Survivor Benefits in Sight. The new proposal for a workable system of survivor benefits for personnel of the Armed Services seems, at last, to offer a plan upon which there can be agreement both as to the need and the solution.

The plan is the result of the combined efforts of the House's Select Committee on Survivor Benefits and representatives of the Department of Defense. Thus it is assured of the support of the Committee which drafted it as well as the backing of the Defense Department and the Administration. There may be some opposition when it comes to the floor of the House (there are always some members who feel they must oppose anything that helps Service personnel), but with the strong presentation that Representative Hardy's Committee will make, House approval would seem assured.

The Senate, on the other hand, will be another problem. That body has shown no interest in the pressing problem of survivor benefits. It is not likely, therefore, that the Senate will initiate any action until the House passes the measure. This situation makes it extremely doubtful that there can be any final action in this session of Congress. However, once interest has been aroused in the Senate—and it will be by the House's action—champions will arise.

The work of the Hardy Committee marks the first time that one legislative committee has gathered together all the factors that enter into survivor benefits and attempted to work out a coordinated system. The current laws that bear on survivor benefits have been enacted over a period of many years and, even then, were drafted to cover specific needs which arose at those times. So varied are they that they represent the work of three different committees in each house of Congress, while in the Executive branch they are administered by four different agencies. The result has been a "hodge-podge" of laws that give some survivors many times the pay which their sponsor received when he was alive. At the same time, other survivors are given only token payments, far below the level of bare subsistence.

The proposed plan (described in detail in various articles throughout this issue of THE JOURNAL) has one feature that will arouse opposition from some of the veterans organizations. That is the abolition of the present flat rate of Veterans Administration payments for death compensation and the substitution of a dependency and indemnity compensation payment based on $100 plus 15 per cent of the base pay of the service member. This principle that benefits should be related to service and earnings and that they are thus a form of deferred compensation is endorsed both by the Committee and by the Defense Department, but it has been consistently opposed by a number of the leaders of veterans organizations. It is to be hoped that the latter will examine the service needs more closely and not adhere too rigidly in this instance to the "no rank" policy on which their organizations have been built.

Certainly the hearings which the Hardy Committee opened this week are of vital importance, not only to every individual in the Services but also to the over-all effectiveness of the Defense organization. THE JOURNAL will give complete coverage of all developments as they occur from week to week, always with the hope that a fair and adequate law will result.

Army Day 1955. Both as a farewell message from an outstanding Chief of Staff and also as an especially fitting message to the Service on the 180th Birthday of the Army, 14 June, THE JOURNAL is pleased to present, on the next page, General Matthew B. Ridgway's article, "The Army Looks to the Future."

SATURDAY, 11 JUNE 1955

eral Ridgway's article tells the Army's story in terms of today's challenges. "Victory on land," writes the Army Chief of Staff, "is an essential part of total military victory, and is dependent on land forces." The total task of defense, he declares, is much too great for any one Service—"Its accomplishment will require the fullest efforts and skill of all our armed forces, of our industry and of our people."

The birth date which the Army will celebrate next Tuesday marks the creation by the Continental Congress on 14 June 1775 of 10 companies of infantry. To that humble beginning the Army of today with its complex organization and atomic weapons goes back in an unbroken line. Except in Korea, it has taken the surrender in all our great wars. In addition to its primary function of fighting, the Army has made many important contributions in such fields as education, exploration, relief, domestic order, government, diplomacy, engineering, sanitation, medicine, transportation, communications, and aviation.

THE JOURNAL joins the Nation in a salute to the U. S. Army.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—The Navy Department revealed yesterday that of the 17,707 ships escorted by the Atlantic Fleet during the "Battle of the Atlantic" only 17 were sunk and 15 damaged by enemy action. The report covered the period from 7 Dec. 1941 to 30 May 1945 and stated that during that period the Allies sunk more than 700 German submarines, of which 120 were accounted for by the ships of the United States Fleet and more than 500 by the British.

50 Years Ago—Quite naturally, Philadelphia socially is deeply grieved over the withdrawal of the Army-Navy football game from Franklin Field and its transfer to Princeton, which is described as "a tactical blunder."

90 Years Ago—The Civil War has reversed national opinion on this point (the establishment of a larger standing Army), as on so many others. It doubtless has effected the change in two ways: first, by habituating the people to so enormous an army, one to be counted almost by millions, that the prospect of sustaining a force of 100,000 or 150,000, seems rather like a sweeping reduction, and effaces the recollection that this latter will be equal to four or five such armies as theory, if not experience, convinced us was quite enough five years ago. And secondly, the fatal lesson derived from the paucity of numbers in the Regular Army, a weakness which the war first disclosed to general appreciation, is not forgotten.

READERS' VIEWS

(Letters to the Editor must have author's name and address, but name will be omitted on publication if writer so states. Longer letters may be extracted for publication.)

Outsider?

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

As one of the "wage seekers" castigated by Captain, R. A., in your issue of 7 May, I feel that a reply is due. Obviously, our young captain hasn't yet gotten the word.

Look around, Son—you'll find that by far the greater majority of your 37 year old temporary majors and lieutenant colonels are career-seekers and have been for these many years. There are some, like there are some among the Regular establishment, who might be classified as wage earners. And while you are looking, give a very critical glance at your own motives in protesting a proposed, and long over-due, augmentation of RA strength.

You'll find, Captain, that the majority of the "outsiders" are not as concerned as your letter indicates that you are with a number on the promotion list. They have been unfamiliar with the procedure and have not yet acquired the ability to recite their file number with the same glibness with which they report their service number. Until the last few years they have had to (and have been willing to) compete for positions and promotion rather than supinely await the time factor in the promotion list. That temporary promotions have become date-of-rank affairs on the fully qualified, rather than best-qualified, basis is not the fault of the non-regular officer on active duty.

This is not intended as a rebuke to the greater number of RA officers but only to that overly vocal few that continually bemoan that "standards of the Regular Army must be lowered" if any career-seeking outsider is accepted into the inner circle. Read your letter again, Captain, and see if your worry is really with a supposed lowering of standards. It is my contention that standards will not lower, but that benefit will accrue by permitting those officers who have, for years, demonstrated their ability and a high desire to serve to seek a career in the Regular ranks and enjoy the opportunities (I do not say privileges, Captain!) of the permanently employed.

In fifteen years, I have not felt myself to be an outsider or Christmas Help—until now.

CAREER-SEEKER

The Reverse Slope

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I agree 1000% with "R. A. Captain" who wrote in May 7th issue of THE JOURNAL concerning proposed integration of thousands of reservists into the Regular Army.

Those of us now in the Regular Army with ten years and less commissioned service are bound to suffer seriously from such legislation. So far we have been the forgotten few, but because we are the junior officers in the Army we've taken it in pretty good shape. But ten years is nothing to be sneezed at and I hate to see that much time spent getting as far as I have up the reverse slope of the War II hump wasted.

As it is now I expect to serve approximately 25 years before even getting a shot at full colonelcy (barring emergencies, etc., which none of us want) but if they integrate a lot of people it will mean more of the War II officers staying on for 30 years instead of dropping off after 20 years, thus the hump will not disappear until I have nearly 30 years service. Naturally 30 years service with the highest possible rank to hope for of Lt. Colonel is not a pleasant prospect especially when men only five years ahead of us at USMA will have spent over 20 years in grades of full Col. and above.

ANOTHER CAPTAIN R. A.

Col.'s Wife Tells Problem

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Apropos of your paragraph in the 21 May JOURNAL, entitled "Renovation of Sill Quarters":

All thanks to those responsible for realizing we could use the same electrical appliances our civilian counterparts enjoy. Now, how about adjusting our travel weight allowance so that we will not have to sell and repurchase them each time we move?

Wife of Col., R.A.

Tax Relief

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I have just read the letter signed "One of the Disabled Victims." This letter, like so many others, fails to mention the income tax relief these "Disabled Victims" enjoy under laws prior to 1 Oct. 1949.

JUST PLAIN RETIRED

Army's Tasks Have Taken On New Challenge, Writes General Ridgway

The Army Looks to the Future

BY GENERAL MATTHEW B. RIDGWAY,
USA
Chief of Staff

ON 14 June 1955 the Army will complete its 180th year of uninterrupted service to the Nation.

When the members of the Second Continental Congress acted in 1775 to create the Army as the first of the country's military forces, they took a significant step to deal with the existing military problem on a national scale. The establishment of the Army was a practical recognition of the urgent need for concerted and unified effort, if the individual liberties which were then at stake were to be preserved. As the struggle progressed from a fight for the liberties of individuals to a war for the freedom of the people as a whole, the establishment of the Army was proved to have been one of the major steps in the achievement of national independence.

The members of the Army properly take pride in the fact that their Service was the first of the American armed forces to be established. They are proud, too, that because only the Army was retained in active status following the Revolution, they alone among the United States armed forces have the distinctive inheritance of an unbroken tradition of active service going back to our beginnings as a nation. The great length of the Army's record, and the gallant feats of the Army in successfully upholding America's heritage which that record sets forth, constitute an abiding inspiration. Nourished by this inspiration, the Army is giving its constant vigorous attention and best efforts to the present and the future.

The most significant responsibility of the Army is to be ready to conduct and to win sustained combat on land. Victory on land is an essential part of total military victory, and is dependent on land forces. Because the ability to win victory in war is our best hope for preserving peace, the Army's competence provides an important part of our capacity for deterring aggression.

The Army's tasks have taken on new challenge because of the conditions which mark the period through which we are now passing. To my mind, the most striking of these are the continuation—perhaps indefinitely—of sustained international tension short of general war; the technological developments which continue to take place in weapons and machines; and the requirement, resulting from both these conditions, for us to maintain forces both in the United and extensively deployed overseas. Certainly, the effect of current trends upon all aspects of the Army's activities has already been and will continue to be very great.

Because of technological advances which have occurred, a war could be launched against the Free World with rapid, massive, and widely distributed blows. The speed of our reaction to such blows should reflect a recognition that, in war, time saved means lives saved. Our military preparations must include several capabilities. One is to halt the advance of attacking forces on overseas battlefields. Another is to mobilize rapidly so that we can provide, in the shortest possible time, the reinforcements—units and men—necessary to defeat the attacking enemy forces. Still another is to defend our own homeland so that it can function effectively as the base for industrial and manpower mobilization. The total task is much too great for any one Service. Its accomplishment will require the fullest efforts and skill of all our armed forces, of our industry, and of our people.

At the same time, victory will depend upon the ultimate destruction of the enemy will to fight. History proves that a nation loses its will to fight only when all reasonable hope of final success is lost, and that this occurs only when that nation's armed forces have been conclusively defeated. While each military Service contributes significantly to the success of the others, any given type of force can ultimately be defeated only by its counterpart in the opposing forces. Only when enemy ground forces have been defeated and domination has been achieved over enemy territory and the people inhabiting it has victory been won.

If war should come, we can assume that it would begin with an enemy attack. The consequences which could be expected if strategically significant areas were overrun by enemy forces would be so serious and the difficulties of reconquest of such areas would be so great that every effort must be made to insure their successful defense against attack. Strategic bombardment of enemy communications and supply sources would have a valuable long-range effect, but its impact upon the capabilities of enemy forces on the battlefield would not be felt for some time after its initiation. While tactical atomic weapons might be used devastatingly against appropriate battlefield targets, an enemy could be compelled to concentrate and thereby furnish suitable atomic targets only if he were faced with substantial defended obstacles on the ground.

Tactically, the Army's capabilities to deal with such conditions have been vastly increased, specifically with regard to its destructive power, its speed of movement, and the range of its blows. Since we must in all prudence assume that an enemy would have comparable capabilities, we must consider the effect of the new weapons and equipment as they influence both the defense and the offense.

The Army is devoting intensive effort to the assessment of technological developments in order to determine their implications with regard to tactics and organization.

While many conclusions remain to be established, it appears to be clear that, for defense, battle area dispersion will be required on an unprecedented scale. The requirement for the highest order of dynamic leadership at all levels is thus greater than ever. In addition, the problems of providing logistical support are greatly multiplied.

In order to exploit the effectiveness of our destructive new weapons, we must be able to concentrate our dispersed forces with great speed, strike coordinated blows, and then, if need be, disperse rapidly again before the enemy can strike back at our concentrated forces. If such action is to succeed, rapid mobility—making best possible use of air movement and swift surface transport—and speedy, extensive communication are indispensable.

The capabilities which the remarkable new weapons and machines have given us must not be allowed to obscure the fundamental fact that wars are fought and victory is won not by weapons and equipment but by men. It is upon their technical skill, their physical stamina, and their spiritual strength that our hope for victory inevitably rests. They must be able to operate the complex weapons and machines of modern warfare with full effectiveness. They must be able to withstand the physical strain and psychological tension of modern combat. And they must understand that the issue is the survival of our Nation and its way of life so that they will possess the dedicated motivation required to prevail against a powerful and unscrupulous enemy.

To perform its essential tasks, therefore, the Army requires adequate numbers of fully trained, thoroughly indoctrinated, and highly motivated men. These men are required not only for the units of the Active Army but also for the Reserve Components. The Active Army must be prepared to withstand the full weight of the initial shock of enemy attack upon our overseas forces, and it must be prepared to carry out an important share of the defense against any attack upon the Continental United States. The Reserve Components must provide not merely the qualified individuals but the trained, organized units which, with minimum additional training, could achieve full combat readiness and move overseas to reinforce the units of the Active Army which were already engaged.

The Army recognizes clearly the wide extent and great importance of its responsibilities. That does not mean that there is any arbitrary conception of the manner in which they will be met. Dogma has no place in the military art. Mental flexibility, receptiveness to new ideas, and dispassionate objectivity are basic elements in the Army's approach to the execution of its tasks. Its weapons, its doctrine, its training, and its planning are continually re-examined as a part of its unceasing striving for the highest attainable degree of individual and collective skill.

In all its actions, the Army is guided by the determination that in peace or war it will serve the Nation in its traditional devoted manner. This is the standard to which, on the Army's 180th anniversary, its members again dedicate themselves. This is the pledge of honor they give their fellow Americans.

NATO's Southern Europe Command Has Little Known Problems and Capabilities

Naples, Italy
IN a slightly group of buildings at Baginoli (graciously constructed by the Germans early in World War II—but not designed for our use) are situated the headquarters of Commander-in-Chief Southern Europe, Admiral William M. Fechteler.

When one thinks of the great importance of this Southern Sector in NATO's European command, he is dismayed that so little is known by the American public of its functions, its problems and its capabilities. Of SHAPE itself, near Paris, it is natural that a great deal is known, not only because of its immediate relationship to all NATO problems, its larger organization and longer practice at integration, but because in its contiguous Central Sector are deployed our own Army's five divisions with significant Air Force elements, and because this is unmistakably the center of the Western Allies' front.

By comparison the Northern Sector (with headquarters at Oslo) and this Southern Sector (stretching along the Mediterranean coast and on to Russia itself in the Caucasus) may seem of far less concern. They would be, if flanks were negligible, which they are not. And the Southern Sector has acquired a good deal of special interest in recent weeks by reason of two new circumstances: (1) the steps toward neutralizing Austria, and (2) the pronounced amiability which Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia has been showing toward Moscow. On the second point this may be said:

Yugoslavia occupies a strategic position touching Italy, the Red satellites, and Greece. While Tito's back was up on Russian matters (but never on strictly Communist behavior, it must be remembered) Yugoslavia seemed an answer to our prayers. The Turks and Greeks effected a defensive alliance with Belgrade; Britain and America went to great pains to settle the Italo-Slav row over Trieste; and we made a good many friendly gestures of our own to make room for this brand supposedly snatched from Moscow's burning. Our more skeptical statesmen, in and out of uniform, always had misgivings, and it would no doubt be a good thing for our more ingenuous novices to be more cautious in our international dealings. Yugoslavia is likely to make at any time such shifts toward neutrality or toward new alliances as at that particular time may appear to be to Yugoslavia's advantage. If memory serves, there are other nations guided by that precise motive of national self-interest. In the present instance, then, there will be less profit in recriminations than in objective planning. Whatever Yugoslavia may do or plan is of importance to the West, and the West must have enough flexibility (and skeptical realism) to cope with probabilities and even possibilities, for certainties are hard to find.

Now as to developments affecting Austria. The anticipated neutrality appears to leave the Central Sector with a wide open right flank. An assured neutral barrier there would have a great many comforting aspects, comparable to those which Switzerland provided during two World Wars, but there is this profound difference: Switzerland has been neutral and at peace for generations because the independent Swiss, well-disciplined and well-armed and blessed by geography, have continued physically able to defend their neutrality. But a new Austria would be called upon to assert her neutrality and the inviolable character of her frontiers, while forever barred from using or even possessing the physical means of enforcing that neutrality. It is quite a difference.

On the southern side of this dubious neutral zone, and under command of a realistic Admiral Fechteler, lies General Gruenther's Southern Sector, separate from his Central Sector completely save in the rear areas, and itself cloven in two so far as ground area is concerned but unified by the considerable means which sea and air afford. That is, Italy (with six divisions, plus sea and air forces) lies to the west of the Adriatic; Greece and Italy (with the equivalent of 5 and 12 light divisions respectively, plus sea and air forces in support) thinly linked to each other by a narrow ribbon of Macedonia, lie to the east of the Adriatic. Hence they comprise the Southeastern Europe command, of which more will be written in a later dispatch.

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER'S KNOWLEDGE of shocking inequities in current Survivor Benefits legislation, which leave many widows of high-ranking officers killed on active duty with payments of $70 per month, was a major factor behind his enthusiastic endorsement for the new plan to equalize and improve payments to widows and children of Servicemen. THE FIRST LADY who has been a frequent guest-of-honor at luncheon meetings of Officer and NCO Wives Clubs has learned of many instances where miserly payments to widows have forced them to live under substandard conditions.

IN THEIR MILITARY CAREERS, the Eisenhowers participated on numerous occasions in collections for wives of officers and enlisted men who died or were killed on active duty. That's why members of the HARDY SELECT COMMITTEE did not need to brief the Chief Executive in detail concerning the need for authority to make lump sum death gratuity payments to widows.

THE "APPROPRIATE SENSE OF URGENCY" ordered by SecNav Thomas for development and application of nuclear power to ships and aircraft will mean initial increased unit costs and heavier unit tonnages for new naval vessels. He wants a "VIGOROUS PROGRAM" for nuclear propulsion of naval aircraft and has ordered that the atomic-submarine program "be expedited." The Secretary's order coincided with CAPITOL HILL CRITICISM that the Navy was not pushing the A-program energetically enough.

SECDEF WILSON'S news conference hesitancy this week to give in an inch to the Hoover Commission's contention that the Pentagon is lagging in supporting basic research could lead the Secretary into formidable controversy. That recommendation was made over the signature of a high-powered task force of scientists, including Dr. Mervin J. Kelly, president of Bell Telephone Laboratories, Inc. A frequent Defense Department consultant, he is no novice in military research.

LT. GEN. WILLARD WYMAN'S assignment to be Deputy Commander of the Continental Army Command at Ft. Monroe, Va., from his present post as Sixth Army CG, indicates the probability that he will move up later to the top job at CONARC—a four-star billet. Gen. John E. Dahlquist, USA, CONARC Chief, is SLATED TO RETIRE before next April. Gen. Wyman is the second senior 3-star officer to Lt. Gen. John W. O'Daniel, USA, who is expected to retire shortly. Many in the Army thought Gen. Wyman was headed for EIGHTH ARMY COMMAND; noteworthy is the fact that Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer, USA, who just went up from the Eighth Army to become Far East Commander, was a division commander in Korea at the same time that Gen. Wyman had a corps.

CNO-DESIGNATE ARLEIGH BURKE'S successor as Commander, Destroyer Force, Atlantic Fleet, is RADM. John C. Daniel, USN, Assistant Chief of Naval Personnel. He is No. 136 on the latest flag list standings; Admiral Burke is No. 91.

THE MACARTHUR PAPERS relating to his views on Soviet participation in the war against Japan, which came into prominence with release of the 1945 Yalta Conference agreements, may be withheld until after the Big Four meeting this summer—10 years later.

COMMANDERS OF 21 ARMIES are not enthused over their diminished control of technical service installations, effective 1 July. That conflict between the Army Commanders and the Tech Service Chiefs could lead to difficulties.

THE AF MANPOWER PROBLEM will be aggravated if the B-52 production speed-up is broadened. As it is, the AF will be hard-pressed to man the 10 wings it is scheduled to add in FY '56. Fact of the matter is that the AF will sustain a PERSONNEL LOSS at the same time that it increases wing strength.

IT'S NOT DE RIGEUR at the Pentagon for Service Secretaries to keep "suggestions" from the SecDef himself in the suspense file. On 29 March, Mr. Wilson recommended that the Army, Navy and Air Force think about appointing civilian PubInfo chiefs. They still haven't been appointed—an indication that there may have been a leap before the look.

GEN. RIDGWAY'S ARTICLE on "The Army Looks to the Future" on the preceding page is believed to be the first signed story by any "first team" Defense official since SecDef Wilson's crackdown on 29 March. In writing it, Gen. Ridgway took advantage of authorization given by SEC'Y STEVENS for signed articles in Service Journals, and thereby emphasized the importance he attaches to renewed celebration of the Army Birthday.

IF CONGRESS FAILS TO ENACT the Hardy Survivor Benefits Plan at this session—and there is reasonable doubt that it will—the House and Senate are expected to vote a six months extension in the automatic $160 wage credit Social Security coverage now in effect and which would expire 30 June. Hardy Select Committee members have been impressed with the AUTHORITATIVE ASSISTANCE supplied them by the special DoD Task Force, headed by RADM. Elton W. Grenfell, USN. An intriguing legislative question is WHICH SENATE COMMITTEE would handle the Survivor Benefits plan when it clears the House, where a conflict of committee interests was resolved by turning the problem over to a Select Committee.

"MR. ARMY MAINTENANCE" could well be the title for Col. George Mather, now 2d Armored Division CofS in Germany, who will report to Ft. Knox, Ky., next month to be president of a newly created board. Its job: to develop policies and coordinate information for maintenance of all Army equipment in the field.

SUPER-SABRE TRAINING at Nellis AFB, Nev., won't be underway at a high clip until this fall. At present, F-100 instruction is being given to cadre pilots of the Tactical Air Command, who then return to units. Ultimate aim is to train all F-100 pilots at Nellis, "Home of the Tigers."

THE AF ACADEMY can look forward to top-notch athletic teams. The first class includes 183 who won letters in one or more sports in high school—127 in football. The teams will be young, however; average age is 18. The typical cadet is 5'10" tall and weighs about 160 pounds.

ARMY AVIATORS got a lift when President Eisenhower's pilot, Lt. Col. William G. Draper, USAF, chose the Aero Commander aircraft for use by the Chief Executive for short hops, such as to the Chief Executive's home at Gettysburg, Pa. The Army has 3 of these planes, which are designated YL-26. The Air Force HAD NONE until the purchase for the White House; will get 15 more this summer. The AF designation is L26-B.

DESPITE CHAIRMAN VINSON'S sponsorship of the measure, there is strong doubt that the House will take action this year on a bill which would set up a separate JAG Corps in the Navy. The Hoover Commission says this should be done. The Pentagon has opposed the proposal in the past.

"The Silent Continent"

"The Silent Continent," the story of Antarctic exploration from 1820, when the area abounding the South Pole was first discovered, through the Navy expedition of 1954-55, has been published by Harper & Brothers. The book, 237 pages long, retails for $3.50.

The co-authors are Comdr. Beverly L. Britton, a former newspaperman, and William H. Kearns, jr., who has flown reconnaissance missions for the Navy in both the Arctic and Antarctic. Kearns was a member of the 1946-47 Byrd-Navy Antarctic Expedition, and almost lost his life when a plane which he was piloting crashed, killing two crew members and leaving him on the ice, seriously injured, for 14 days before being rescued.

NATO's Southern Europe Command

arated land areas under Admiral Fechter's command needs little pointing out. Geographically their exposure to attack from the north is manifest. History shows that with the conventional weapons of various periods those lands can be badly hurt by a markedly superior force possessing both resources and determination. What prophecy tries to show is less reliable in precise terms, but the most conservative of prophets would agree that the vastly greater reach and power of today's new, unconventional weapons create a vulnerability vastly greater than any of the past.

What is true of the Central Sector, then, is undeniable in the South, and perhaps is more readily seen because of the extent of these southern spaces as related to their modest defense forces and to the decidedly limited resources, military and non-military alike, of these nations in the South. Further, the geographical vulnerability which affects all NATO nations in varying degree—indeed all regions of Earth in this nuclear age—is amplified by another sort of vulnerability which is still more disturbing at times: this is the exposure of a peaceably disposed nation or group of nations to the sudden and unpredictable assault of a savage aggressor. We all sit here, waiting to let the other man hit us first. This has been said many, many times. As one encounters official complacency in many NATO nations, including our own, where Russia's recent coolings have deluded people who ought to know better, there is a feeling that the same warning must be given over and over again, without ceasing.

Here in Naples (which many of us have not seen since 1944 when we saw it in less pleasing form—it's wonderful to see today's thriving harbor filled with shipping and lined by fine piers, where once was a scramble of wrecks) or rather at Bagnoli headquarters, there is no complacency, but a calm awareness of what is needed and what can be done to achieve it. It is a thrifty organized headquarters, as is the NATO style generally, with the staff set-up following the proper pattern of dividing responsibility among the chosen officers of the several NATO nations concerned, and at the same time making sure that the elaborate work of planning and supply and training is conducted steadily and surely and as swiftly as is possible, all things considered. The divisions of effort, both by function and geography, have been found effective, and the progress achieved in the past two years is significant. The growth has not been in number of units (an echo of experience in the Central and Northern Sectors) but in their equipment and training, largely through the considerable aid from the United States both as to material and as to guidance.

It is a continuing problem to know just how much and how advanced material to give—enough to spur the effort of Allies, and not so much as to bankrupt ourselves or to encourage the hope that Uncle is a permanently soft touch. There is a continuous problem, too, as to how surely the admirable effort of our military friends will be supported by the political and economic and psychological realities which have their enormous impact on military planning and performance, in every European nation as in the United States itself. In old John Donne's figure of speech, the military is not an island by itself, and when the political bell tolls, the military would best listen—in Rome or Athens or Ankara, precisely as in the Pentagon.

Now, when one compares the land forces and the air forces under Admiral Fechter's headquarters with those available to the Reds, the difference in weight is as marked as elsewhere. In those moments of discouragement it is pleasant to recall that the Sixth U. S. Fleet is near at hand, and that the Strategic Air Command knows the way. Nothing whatever is said officially about the present atomic capability of the land and tactical air forces in this particular sector, but neither Washington nor SHAPE has left any doubt that in case of attack SHAPE's forces will use atomic weapons. And the Southern Sector is a part of SHAPE, and must be thought of as following the identical common policy. Further, there is no remote doubt about the impressive atomic capabilities of the Sixth Fleet and of SAC.

We can afford, then, when thinking of the vulnerability of the Southern Sector to the enemy's nuclear weapons, to give a few thoughts to the other side of the picture—anybody engaging in attacking the Southern Sector is just as vulnerable (and probably more so) to our own massive retaliation. The reach of our planes, whether based on sea or land, is a long one, and their bombing capacity is very great. Certain aspects of this will be mentioned in a later letter on the Southeastern Europe command.

INDUSTRY IN DEFENSE

World-wide Electronic Supply Pipeline Planned

The Air Force plans to establish a world-wide electronic communications system for ordering supplies. When completely set-up, the new system will save weeks in ordering and shipping overseas supplies.

The system will work this way: a "transceiver," a desk-sized transmitting and receiving device developed by the International Business Machines Corporation, will be installed at 36 different locales in the United States.

By an electronic process, these machines will transmit card impressions to other transceivers which will produce cards identical to those which are sent. This system will permit transmission and receipt of stock and accounting data in machine language. These cards will then be entered into the electronic "memory" of an electronic processing machine. The net result will be that the machines will perform in minutes more work than is now done with days of paper handling.

The transceivers will be connected by leased telephone lines in the United States and by radio overseas. It is estimated a cut from 10 to 20 per cent on the number of days in the supply pipeline will be effected by the end of this year when all the transceivers are installed in this country. Another 10 per cent will follow when the overseas transceivers are added. When the world-wide system is in effect, cards from overseas will be flashed to the interior of this country through Newark, Oakland and New Orleans. The transceivers will be entirely under the control of the Army Materiel Command.

A transceiver was installed at Robins AFB Ga., 6 June, and another transceiver is already in operation at the WRAMA USAF Storage Branch in Savannah. The Statistical Services Division of the WRAMA's Comptroller's office will handle the actual operation of the Robins' transceiver. The WRAMA equipment will be connected with the 3101st Logistic Control Group (Atlantic) at Newark, which will serve as central office for all installations in the Eastern portion of the United States.

Make Adapter Amplifier For Air Intercoms

An electronic device which makes possible quick and simple modernization of military airborne intercommunication systems is being shipped in quantity to the Air Force.

Developed by the Radio Corporation of America, the transistorized electronic device, small enough to conceal in the hand, obviates the need for replacing an aircraft's entire intercommunication system in order to utilize modern dynamic microphones and headsets.

The device is an adapter amplifier built around three tiny transistors. Its development was revealed last year, and is believed to be the first transistorized production equipment of this type ever delivered to the Air Force.

The device is used as a microphone preamplifier to permit direct replacement of outdated carbon microphones and magnetic headsets with modern dynamic types. It measures 1½ inches in diameter and three inches in length, and weighs six ounces. It requires less current than is needed to light an ordinary flashlight bulb.

Jump Boot Has "Pant Holder"

A new feature, the "pant holder," has been added to the "Skytrooper" jump boot, manufactured by the Red Wing Shoe Company, W. D. Sweasy, president, has announced.

Three rows of rubberized woven bands inside the top of the boot form a gripping surface and provide the right amount of friction to keep trousers in place.

The "Skytrooper" is manufactured by the Red Wing Shoe Co., 113-129 Main Street, Red Wing, Minn.

Tyndall AFB Will Test Simulator For F-102A

Pilots at Tyndall AFB, Fla., soon will be getting realistic training in supersonic flying in a new simulator developed by Link Aviation, Inc., and delivered to the base for operational suitability testing.

The simulator, developed in cooperation with the Wright Air Development Center and the Air Research and Development Command, will be used to train pilots of the supersonic Convair F-102A interceptor.

The WADC Equipment Lab project officer, Carl McNulty, worked closely with Nelson Lawrence, Link project manager, throughout the development of the simulator. Contracting Officer for the Air Materiel Command was T. E. Readnow.

The F-102A aircraft is a delta-winged single-engine craft with an operational ceiling extending into the stratosphere.

The Link simulator, representing a major change in computation philosophy, is the first ever built in this country incorporating a Direct Current computer system. The switch from AC to DC computers is said to make possible more accurate computing over a greater range of aerodynamic variables as well as more precise and realistic simulation of the aircraft's response to control pressures and outside disturbances.

Other advantages credited to DC computation include a reduction in the number and size of amplifiers, greater standardization of components and a generally more efficient operation.

Accessibility of components and ease in maintenance have been facilitated in the new simulator through the use of revolving amplifier racks using the plug-in type amplifiers.

Another feature is the inclusion of facilities for switching the device to automatic pilot.

The conduct of a normal training flight in the device requires the presence of three people in the operating room.

The pilot-trainee sits in the cockpit and "flies" the simulator, the instructor observes the pilot from a jump seat just outside the cockpit, and the operator controls the flight by monitoring his duplicate instruments, setting up communications and navigational problems, introducing emergency conditions, and operating the three recorders.

The Link simulator provides numerous flight training provisions for improving pilot proficiency. A partial list of these provisions includes cockpit familiarization and cockpit checks, engine start and run-up procedures, takeoffs under all conditions and radio and navigation procedures.

Normal and abnormal flight, duplicating all of the performance characteristics of a supersonic aircraft also are provided, as well as provisions for pilots to cope with countless simulated emergency situations.

J65 With Afterburner To Be Shown In Paris

The supersonic-speed afterburner version of the Curtiss-Wright J65 jet engine is being shown publicly for the first time at the 21st Paris International Aviation Exhibition, from 10-19 June at Le Bourget Airport in France.

Also featured in the Curtiss-Wright Corporation display is a full size operating Turbo Compound outway engine, an operating Electric Propeller exhibit, a detailed model of a Simulator for the U. S. Air Force B-36 ten-engine intercontinental bomber, and the latest model of the Cyclone 9 piston engine.

Solar Gets Contract

A $2,300,000 order for afterburners and other components for late model turbojet engines has been placed by the Wright Aeronautical Division of Curtiss-Wright Corp. with Solar Aircraft Company. Solar also is reported negotiating to develop and build afterburners for a British aircraft firm.

Ex-Naval Officer Reports on Civil War Journalism

"The North Reports the Civil War," by Dr. J. Cutler Andrews, professor of history and chairman of the department of history at Pennsylvania College for Women, tells the story of the newsmen who reported the Civil War for Northern newspapers. Published by the University of Pittsburgh Press, the book is 813 pages and retails for $6.

It was in this struggle that the transmission of news by telegraph first occurred on a large scale. Much of the material in this book is from the correspondents' own letters, diaries, dispatches and printed news stories.

Dr. Andrews was a Naval intelligence officer during WW II. As a staff officer, he helped prepare the annual report of Fleet Admiral Ernest J. King; served as Navy editor of various joint Army and Navy intelligence publications; and compiled and edited material presented by the Navy at the Congressional investigation of the Pearl Harbor disaster.

RETIRED SERVICE NOTES

Hardy Plan Would Give Added Survivor Benefits To Scores Of Retired Personnel

Retired military personnel and their dependents would benefit from the recommendations contained in the new survivor benefits legislation proposed by the Hardy Committee.

Here are some of the changes which would go into effect if the bill becomes law:

If the death of a retired member is directly attributable to his service, the compensation paid to his widow would be $100 a month plus 15 per cent of the basic pay he would have been receiving if on active duty on the date of his death. If there is a minor child the widow would receive additional compensation from Social Security until the child reaches age 18. At age 65, the widow's compensation would be boosted by Old Age Survivor Insurance payments.

Present law provides that if an individual has contributed to Social Security for more than five years and subsequently becomes totally and permanently disabled, he is automatically insured for the rest of his life without making further contributions. The new proposal provides that retired personnel who become permanently and totally disabled as a result of military service "shall be deemed to have contributed for a period of five years," thus making them eligible for the automatic insurance privilege.

Personnel who have retired since December 1950 and who cannot now count the gratuitous Social Security wage credits which they received while in Service, would be permitted to count such credits (from December 1950 until the date of their retirement) under the Hardy Plan.

He urged "that the military retired pay be adjusted at age 65 by some factor that properly recognizes the addition of social security retirement benefits at that age."

The Defense Department's view is that Service personnel who participate in Social Security on a paying basis must be accorded the right to take advantage of the old age benefits offered by the plan to other participants.

U. S. Coast Guard

THE Coast Guard Attrition Bill has passed the House, but no action has been taken on the Senate side. The bill is still under consideration by the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee which meets again on 22 June. It appears likely, however, that the proposed legislation will be passed before Congress adjourns.

Details of the pending legislation appeared in THE JOURNAL of 9 April.

May Retirements

Coast Guard retirements for May total 28.

Of this number, one is a commander, three Lt. commanders, six lieutenants, two lieutenants (jg), four ensigns, and 12 chief warrant officers.

West Point Retired, Led by President, Vie for Attention With Class of '55

The classes of '15 and '55 competed for public attention this week at the U. S. Military Academy graduation ceremonies, which were broadcast and telecast to the nation. Both won.

With its most illustrious alumnus, General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, on hand for the gay festivities, including a class reunion on 6 June and graduation exercises the next day, the class of '15 had a fine time of it as guests of Lt. Gen. Blackshear Bryan, USA, Academy superintendent.

The 469 cadets who received their diplomas from the President were led by 2d Lt. Lee D. Olivey. 2d Lt. John P. Doyle, jr., commanded a great cheer from the field house audience as he accepted the President's hand shake at the end of the class.

Speaking to the graduates, the Chief Executive said:

"You will be pioneers in the search for new ways to strengthen the common defense from the platoon to the general staff. Many times you will feel that your mistakes outnumber your triumphs. But without the yeast of pioneers, the United States Army or any other organization of men cannot escape degeneration into a ritualistic worship of the status quo."

The President's participation in the graduation ceremony culminated a busy visit to West Point where he arrived on Retired for physical disability were: Cdr. George E. McCarthy (100% Perm.), Lt. Cdr. Burritt K. Cook (20% Temp.), Lt. (R) Roy V. Hatfield (100% Temp.), and Ens. (R) Rhomas M. McGurrian (100% Temp.).

LCdr. George A. Choquette and Ens. Fred W. Maukart were retired after 30 years of service.

Retired after 20 years' service were: LCdr. Oswald R. Olsen; Lts. Clemons C. Pearson, Charles W. Smith, Henry L. Crowley and Harold G. Dinwiddie; Lts. (jg) John Lullie and Lipscomb S. Neal; Ens. George T. Ferreira and Bradford R. Hitchcock; and CWO's James M. Altman, Oliver F. Berry, William A. Brady, Beverly M. Campbell, Carmelo Cordice, Leonard Elliott, Henry W. Goodwin, William H. Knowles, John F. Simpson, Victor A. Sooy, Robert L. Thagard and Wilton H. Williams.

President Eisenhower has appointed 17 officers and enlisted men to the temporary warrant grades shown below. Effective June, dates of rank are given in parentheses.

TO CWO, W-4

Wayne C. Wallace (8), Frank A. Mattson (10), Mark K. Hutchinson (10), Gordon White (10), Floyd J. Jester (10), Bannister M. Barnett (21), and Charles J. Wood (21).

TO CWO, W-3

John W. Beach (8), Burton E. Howell (10), and John T. MacKay (25).

TO CWO, W-2

Peter P. Zilkhan (17), Wendell C. Leatherman (17), and Phillip L. Regan (27).

TO WO, W-1 (BOATSWAIN)

Richard "M" Burdick (1), Frank A. Coleman (1), and "J" "C" Turner (1).

TO WO, W-1 (PAY CLERK)

Eugene B. Cox (1).

Warrant Retention

Headquarters reminds permanent CWO's and WO's that the Warrant Officer Act of 1954 requires that they be retired 60 days after 30 years' service has been completed, unless they request retention and are recommended for retention by a board.

Those who wish to remain on active duty, the Coast Guard states, should submit requests for retention at least four months before the date on which 30 years' service will be completed. The request should contain detailed reasons for requesting retention and an unconditional statement that the applicant will agree to remain on active duty for one year from his scheduled retirement date.

Headquarters emphasizes that retention depends on Board action, and that, if approval is granted, no commitment will be made regarding duty assignments.

New Plan Could Up Retired Pay $162

ing factors are involved. The present maximum benefit paid under the Social Security program for a single person over 65 is $108; for a married man and his wife, both age 65, the amount is $162.80. Relatively few military personnel, however, will be eligible for the top payment.

At present, Social Security wage credits are granted to military personnel on a gratuitous basis. Because of this fact, and as the result of a Social Security regulation that the same years of service cannot be counted for both military retirement and Social Security benefits, only those who retire for physical disability or for WWI service can now claim both retired pay and Social Security retirement benefits.

Under the Hardy Plan, active Service personnel will contribute two per cent of their basic pay to the Social Security funds. Thus, they will be eligible to claim the additional retirement benefit when they reach the age of 65.

The amount of the Social Security benefit which can be added to retired pay will be determined by the contribution which the Serviceman makes to Social Security after enactment of the Hardy proposal, plus the gratuitous wage credits which he has received since December 1950.

Gratuitous wage credits granted between 1947 and December 1950 cannot be counted by personnel who retire on the basis of service after enactment of the Hardy Plan.

Service personnel on the retired rolls who are now unable to claim the gratuitous wage credits for Social Security retirement benefits, will be permitted by the Hardy Plan to claim the credit from December 1950 until the date of their retirement.

The Pentagon supported the additive feature in hearings before the Hardy Committee late this week, but suggested that authority to count gratuitous Social Security wage credits be extended back to 1947 instead of 1950.

Radm. E. W. Grenfell, USN, told the Committee that the bill, together with current provisions of law, would appear to make all retired members eligible for some OASI benefit based on military service "except those members who retired between 1947 and 1950 and who have died, or will die as the result of a non-service connected death."

This, he said, is the only major change the Pentagon would recommend in the measure.

The GAO protested inclusion of the additive feature. Charles E. Eckert, Legislative Attorney, Office of the Comptroller General, said "It is our view that such action is neither necessary nor required and will tend to increase the existing disparity between retirement benefits for the military and those provided for civilian employees of the Government."

Sunday, 5 June, with the First Lady. That day, he reviewed the Corps of Cadets and presented the first annual Eisenhower award, a silver tray, donated by a Baltimore industrialist to Cadet Delbert H. Jacobs for excellency in military psychology.

On Monday the President marched with his famed class whose only member now on active duty is Lt. Gen. H. R. Harmon, USAF-Ret., first superintendent of the U. S. Air Force Academy.

It was recalled during the class of '15 reunion on Monday that 11 years ago that day the Normandy invasion was launched under General Eisenhower's Command. On that same day the President's son, Maj. John Eisenhower, was graduated from the Academy.

On Monday the President also visited at the West Point hospital with Brig. Gen. Chauncy L. Fenton, who is ill.

Oldest graduate at the Alumni Day festivities was Maj. Gen. Henry C. Hodges, 81. He did not march, however. The parade was led by General Bryan and Maj. Gen. C. D. Herron, USA-Ret., USMA '99.

Joining the President at West Point were scores of other officers who had completed distinguished military careers. Many of these were there to see their sons commissioned in the Army and Air Force.

Army Generals Move as CofS Shift Pends

Third Army at Ft. McPherson, Ga.

Maj. Gen. Robert N. Young, USA, former Army G-1, is expected to be nominated momentarily by President Eisenhower for three-star rank as commander of the Sixth Army at the Presidio of San Francisco, Calif.

Maj. Gen. Young

General Young is under orders to the Sixth Army, coincidental with the announcement that Lt. Gen. Willard Wyman, USA, its present commander, will become Deputy Commander of the Continental Army Command under General John E. Dahlquist, USA, due to retire early next year.

Maj. Gen. Robert M. Montague, USA, who has been Deputy CONARC Commander, and who earlier had been indicated for assignment as head of the MAAG at Saigon, Indo-China, has been reassigned instead to an unspecified post in the Far East Command.

A successor is expected to be named soon for Lt. Gen. John W. O'Daniel, USA, who was due to retire last June but who was kept on active duty to head the MAAG at Saigon.

At the Pentagon, interest is keen as to the major general who will be named to be G-3 in place of Lt. Gen. James M. Gavin, USA, now Deputy Chief of Staff for Plans and Research.

Maj. Gen. Paul DeW Adams, USA, is filling this assignment in an "acting" capacity.

An important new Pentagon assignment change will bring Brig. Gen. Thomas L. Sherburne, USA, who is on the list of selections to major general, from duty as artillery commander of the 8th Infantry Division at Ft. Carson, Colo., to be Deputy G-1 under Maj. Gen. Donald P. Booth, USA.

General Sherburne, who will be 50 in July, served as I

Brig. Gen. Sherburne

Corps artillery commander and subsequently as Chief of Staff of the Eighth Army in Korea when General Taylor was its Commanding General.

During WWII, General Sherburne was artillery commander of the famed 101st Airborne Division, commanded by the Chief of Staff-designate, General Taylor.

Arrival of General Sherburne at the Pentagon will mean that the Army will have four general officers in G-1. The other two are Brig. Gen. William C. Westmoreland, USA, and Brig. Gen. Joseph Crawford, USA.

Retirement on 30 June of Maj. Gen. Joseph Cleland, USA, as commander of XVIII Airborne Corps at Ft. Bragg, N. C., will result in assignment of Maj. Gen. Ridgely Gaither, USA, to that post.

At Bragg, Maj. Gen. Thomas J. H. Trapnell, USA, will take command of the 82d Airborne Division, replacing Maj. Gen. Francis W. Farrell, USA, reassigned to duty with the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

In another airborne shift, Maj. Gen. Derrill M. Daniel, USA, has been announced officially as Commanding General of the 11th Airborne Division at Ft. Campbell, Ky. (THE JOURNAL, 14 May).

Maj. Gen. Wayne C. Smith, USA, who had been 11th CG, has been given a new assignment as Deputy Commander of the XVIII Airborne Corps.

Ensign Pirie will report to the USS Meredith for duty with the Atlantic Fleet.

AF Step-Up After Stretch-Out Means More Planes Quicker; Probably More Wings

Accelerated production of Air Force B-52 Stratofortress bombers on the heels of the Soviet pre-May Day flyovers will result in more aircraft and possibly more wings in fiscal '56 than seemed likely only several weeks ago.

Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson, who had indicated in May that the Air Force display of unexpected bomber strength and new fighter aircraft would not require additional funds for the Air Force, has changed his mind.

He went before the Senate Appropriations Committee this week to ask funds—$350,000,000 for a 35 per cent increase in B-52 production.

At a news conference, the Secretary said on 6 June that the Pentagon is now embarked on an intensive review of the military program. He said this type of review would be done twice a year—just before the wind-up of action on the budget for the fiscal year starting 1 July and at the time, usually about November, when plans for the next year's budget are solidified.

In addition to the decision to speed B-52 production, Mr. Wilson indicated the possibility of accelerated production of supersonic fighters, specifically the F-100.

Asked if the Air Force had recommended such action, as it had sought the 35 per cent boost in big bomber production, the Secretary replied, "Not yet."

The $350,000,000 which the Secretary asked from the Senate Committee would not be a net increase over prior budget requests.

There will be unexpended money in various areas of the budget; for example, the Air Force will save millions of dollars by reason of the fact that it does not expect to reach projected manpower goals.

Mr. Wilson wants authority to shift money within the budget for the plane production. He asked the Senate Committee to authorize $206,000,000 above what President Eisenhower asked for plane production, and urged that $150,000,000 cut by the House be restored.

In view of the fact that the additional money was asked following May indications that such requests would not be made, there was renewed speculation this week that the new look at the defense program would show an ability and desirability to reach a strength of more than the forecast 131 wings in the next fiscal year.

Col. Burton Sams Is New C.O. at Kisarazu

Col. Burton K. Sams, USAF, has assumed command of Kisarazu AB, Japan, replacing Col. Robert P. Baldwin, USAF, who returned to the Zone of Interior for reassignment.

Colonel Sams previously was stationed at Langley AFB, Va., as Executive Officer of the 405th Fighter Bomber Wing.
